

the beanstalk —
at a new tall story

Grocer Jack
found himself in a
when he tried to other his crop of tomatoes.

Sprung

For the fruit has sprung at the top of a drain-pipe at his shop, — The Country Garden.
And there they must ay — for Jack is afraid of
ights.

His wife Josephine said:
"I can't persuade him to win up a ladder and pick them, so we will have to

"They are doing very well, and look very healthy."

'Why take the mickey out of my job?'

LAVATORY cleaner
was today trying to
ush out the reason
why her job has become the butt of
jokes by two top TV
comics.

Funnyman Stephen
Fry and Hugh Laurie
have dreamed up a
ketch in which they get about cleaning the toos at Uttoxeter. They make reference to the Staffordshire market
town in their show
'Fry and Laurie',
which is screened on BBC2 on Tuesdays. But the woman
who has the real job
of keeping the town's
five public toilets
pick and span for the last 24 years says she is baffled why Uttoxeter should have been thrown into the spotlight.

Headache
Jean Williams, from Higham, was once voted among the top four ilet cleaners in Britain.

Today, she said: "I doubt whether that has got anything to do with it."

She added: "My biggest headache is
sandals — not comedians."

Town Mayor Mr
Charles Tunnicliffe
said: "I don't know
why Fry and Laurie
picked on Uttoxeter.
We are trying to cultivate a tourist
trade, so we don't want people taking
the mickey out of us."

A BBC spokesman said: Fry and Laurie

JUNE 20th - THE JUNCTION, CAMBRIDGE

The Junction, a small hall in the middle of nowhere, seems hardly big enough to fit all the Joneses' punters in. Perhaps this lack of space is the reason for the surge to the front as soon as Mike walks on stage.

Move Mountains was the first song I ever heard played live by Jesus Jones, and it lived up to all my expectations, as did the whole concert. Iain was suitably manic, Mike gabbled on about the football match and the roadcrew threw people off the stage.

Barry D takes the stage and performs a shortened

'Barry D Next to Cleanliness' and everyone goes mad. Mike shouts, "What do you want next?" The front row sneak a look at the playlist.

"Info Freako!"

All the singles get played and these definitely seem to be everyone's favourites.

The high points for me however were Song 13 (in my opinion their best track to date), Winston (a reggae-inspired track with Barry D rapping), and Blissed, a suitable subtle climax to an evening of noise and excitement.

THURSDAY 28.6.90

I wake up at 6 am go to the kitchen have a cuppa soup 3 slices of bread a croissant & a cup of coffee, then I go back to bed. About 11 o'clock Al Jaworski (we share a flat) knocks on my door, "I'm going down the laundrette coz I wanna wash my boots, & I need some clothes to stop them banging about, immediately I realise I'm on to a good thing & hand him the bag at the foot of my bed, if my dirty clothes are acting merely as a buffer for his boots maybe he'll pick up the bill. Not so, "We'll go halves" he offers, I suppress my feelings.

Down stairs the front room door has been left open all night & our pet chinchilla has escaped, we can't find him anywhere, we both feel slightly worried.

By 12.30 I'm in Farmers Market in Chelsea sharing a bottle of Nuit St George (red) with resident alcoholic Martin K, it looks like rain so we move on to a place with a roof. Early lunch at Ed's Diner, then on to the Water Rat for a pint of Holsten. We decide to check some shops, Martin steals a pair of sun glasses, strolling back to his flat on Worlds End we contemplate sex with various skinny women.

PTO.

Mossley

In the flat we get the guitars out, attempting to write a song, no such luck.
5 o'clock strikes - happy hour at Muswellis, Ollie the barman mixes a mean Margarita (whole lot of shakin' going on, I am thinking) a few of them then a cab back to Ealing, bad news on the radio Prince Charles has broken his arm in 2 places, the royal doctor advises him not to go to these places again. Fortunately enough we end up in the Kings Arms.

Elton John gets his first no 1, I don't know what to think.

Martin gets a late hair cut at Garbo's Ealing.
We go for a drink with Tom the hairdresser, he doesn't like Jesus Jones & vows never to give me a free haircut.

Matt Peters famous LimeLight D.J. comes in we discuss music, compare wisdom teeth & chat to the locals about sampling during the war (apparently rationing meant 1 sample per song).

By 11 o'clock we've made our way back to the Hanger Lane flat, the chinchilla is back & madder than ever, 2½ hours later we finish writing a song, a ferocious little number about a kid who thinks he's a cowboy.

At 1.50 AM Alan & tasty tart Claudia come back from a deep & heavy night at Mike & Gens. Claudia takes her wake-up off & rolls a massive joint.
